Imagine: A future world in which we all value people and life and participate in a flow of generosity. A world where sharing our gifts and the mundane tasks of life are both done with wholehearted willingness, free of coercion. A world where attending to everyone's needs is the organizing principle. Miki Kashtan weaves together vivid social science fiction stories that bring that world to life with compelling nonfiction about how to get there. She invites us to dream the future on a global scale and to bring this future into being by living and working for change as if that world already exists. In particular, her novel approach to dilemmas of leadership challenges us to align our use of power with our deepest longings and values. Miki Kashtan, PhD, is an internationally known teacher and practitioner of Nonviolent Communication. She lives in Oakland, California.

Reweaving Our Human Fabric is one of the most engaging books I have read in a long time. It deals with practical real-life challenges and opportunities of building a world which meets the needs of all, is democratic and supports peaceful change and resolution of conflicts. Miki's book takes a thorough look at the implications and consequences of the societal structures and approaches in our current world and what shifts in consciousness as well as structural structures would need to be created to create a nonviolent world that works for everyone.
